

ROCKY MOUNTAIN SECURITY GROUP

Pros of a monitored alarm system	Cons of an unmonitored alarm system
Highly-trained dispatchers are standing by 24/7 and respond within seconds of a security breach.	An unmonitored system relies solely on those who may or may not hear your alarm; and may or may not react. Car alarms are a good example of this.
Based on your account details, dispatchers will either call police or phone authorized parties to respond to the incident. The dispatcher may even call your cellular phone for further instruction.	If no one witnesses the security breach or reacts to a sounding alarm, the police are not notified. Likewise, by the time someone does notice and notifies police, it may be too late.
In the event of intrusion while you are at home or other situation where emergency personnel are needed, a panic button may be faster than dialing 911. Panic buttons can be programmed to trigger either a piercing siren or silent alarm.	If your system is unmonitored, you cannot use a panic button to notify police and must rely on your telephone to do so.
Our panels can also contact the monitoring agency by radio or cellular backup, ensuring your safety if phone lines go down.	If phone lines are cut or damaged, the option of notifying police through a land line is no longer possible.
In the event of an emergency, a prompt response can mean the difference between intervention and disaster.	If no one witnesses the intrusion or intervenes, the intruder will have ample time to commit crimes against you or your property.
A monitored system gives you peace of mind. Rest assured that day or night trained dispatchers are ready to assist you by dispatching emergency personnel to your home or business at a seconds notice.	It only takes a few moments for a crime to be committed, but the financial and emotional damage can last a lifetime. Worry and stress can take its toll and waste your time and energy.
